Image sharpening The star of any image editing application is its layer-based sharpening. In Photoshop, when you apply a layer mask to a layer, the layer mask becomes the new layer that gets sharpened. Thus, when you apply a layer mask, you create a new, second layer, and then sharpen that new layer. You get to see how the sharpening tool affects the entire image at once. Figure 15-17 shows how a blurred image results when a layer mask is applied to a blurred image. A variety of sharpening tools are available in Photoshop and are used to sharpen images. Image sharpening is commonly used to correct poor-quality images, but because of the layer-based system, you can also sharpen images that were created by someone else and you have no control over. One problem with that method is that you may sharpen an image too much or too little because that person applied its own vision to sharpen the image. Photoshop gives you two parameters for sharpening images: Radius and Amount. Your sharpening tool has a Radius parameter, which is the amount of pixels to sharpen. Figure 15-18 illustrates the Radius setting. I chose 10 pixels. The Amount setting determines how much the sharpening sharpens an image. Your sharpening tool gives an Amount of pixels to sharpen and you can set a percentage. So, if you sharpen 10 percent of the pixels, it will sharpen the entire image by 10 pixels. Make your Radius and Amount settings work for you. Too many sharpenings always oversharpen an image, so find the right Radius and Amount setting that works. The maximum Radius setting for Photoshop is 60 pixels. Photoshop has a built-in Sharpen tool, and you can also use the Brush tool to sharpen images, or use the Expression tools to add Filter effects, such as the Lens Correction filter (Chapter 16). You can add sharpening and other image effects in Adobe Acrobat using the Smart Filter feature. The default setting for Photoshop's sharpening tool is Auto and it works very well for most images. The default settings for Photoshop's sharpening tool are Radius 10

One of the most popular slots of all time is still a popular current game. Join the battle against the evil wizard as you spin your way to riches. The original game was not much to look at but it was fun and plenty of action. In fact, it was so successful that it is still being developed to this day. The game offers 10 levels of play, each one designed to take you further than the last. The game is a classic favorite not only at one site but numerous other websites. This game is played with 3 reels and 4 rows. There is the chance to win the jackpot if the game is played just right. Why Play the Game The company that created this games was so successful in creating a video slot game that they went on to create a full series of slot games, one of which was produced by IGT (International Game Technology). The most popular one was now as popular as ever. This video slot game goes by the name of "The Wizard of Oz" and is still as popular as ever. The reels are 3 and the game features a Wild symbol that makes all wild symbols work in the game. There are a total of 10 progressive jackpots on this game that are different in a way. For example, the first one is won by playing 3 or more of the Scatters and any 3 or more of the Bonus symbols. The second one is won by playing 3 or more of the Scatters and the Bonus sign, you then have to win 3 times in a row to take the pot. The third is won by playing 3 or more Bonus symbols and the fourth one is a single Slot symbol, all of which have been set up to be different but the same. It is possible to get a bonus round in this game if you win the progressive jackpots. Another thing to note about this game is that it is also played in Las Vegas. The slot is available in casinos all around the world. Play the Games Players can play for fun, for practice and to try to win the big jackpot in which they will be playing for real money. The casinos where the slot game is played are the Pechanga Resort and Casino, LA Live, Caesars Palace, Boardwalk, the Bally's and the Paris Hotel and Casino. These games are also downloadable which means that you will get an instant download of the games to your mobile phones or devices. You can even play at home using a 05a79cecff

(AP) — The Pennsylvania Supreme Court has refused to consider the Trump administration's appeal in a lawsuit by the attorney general that would make more than 2,000 former criminal defendants eligible to have their records expunged. In a decision announced Tuesday, the court said the state government has not formally taken a position on the president's plan to wipe clean federal criminal records for those who were convicted before a 2016 reform that removed certain restrictions on the expungement process. But the court went on to say that if it were to grant the administration's petition, it would be enough to render moot the state's appeal. A spokesman for U.S. Attorney General William Barr says the Justice Department is still reviewing the decision. The lawsuit says the reforms created by the Justice Department's Office of Justice Programs in November 2016 violate the US Constitution's promise of due process and equal protection.For the three network reality TV dating shows, season is back, and CBS has renewed all three. Meet The Parents will return with three additional weeks of episodes, getting a full 16-episode season this summer, per our sister site TVLine. (The full 18-episode fourth season is on hold while the network focuses on new programs, but has now been granted a renewal.) Also getting a second season is When We First Met, which is being back in the 10-11 p.m. time slot, where it had originally debuted. The new season will comprise 13 episodes. All-American Muslim is not being renewed for a second season. The new season of The Amazing Race premieres Monday, June 9 at 8 p.m.

Utilization of video and electronic fetal monitoring during labor by non-physician clinicians. Maternal and fetal complications associated with failure to utilize electronic fetal monitoring (EFM) and appropriate application of the fetal scalp electrode have been reported. The purpose of this study was to determine if the rate of EFM and fetal scalp electrode (FSE) application has increased since the 1990s. A retrospective cohort design was used to study two populations of vaginal deliveries over a two-year period (2003-2004, 2003-2005) from two urban teaching hospitals. Inclusion criteria required that all women received one-on-one active management of the third stage of labor and a maternal/neonatal follow-up at the designated hospitals. Estimated gestational age was calculated by last menstrual period (LMP) on admission. Rates of EFM and FSE application were determined by the obstetrical providers who managed the patient. Over the two-year period, 1,114 deliveries were studied. The rate of EFM and FSE application increased from 39.1% to 56.4% (OR 2.2 95% CI 1.7-2.8, p The clearance of fibrin clots by mononuclear phagocytes in vivo. An in vivo study using rats. The ability of rats to clear fibrin clots was studied by following 125I-fibrinogen labeled fibrin clots implanted subcutaneously and measuring the clearance rate of the labeled fibrin molecules. Clearance was slower in thrombocytopenic rats than in normal rats. The speed of clearance was not dependent on the length of time the clots were left in the implantation site. Human fibrinogen could replace rat fibrinogen in the rate of clearance. Normal rats were treated with cyclophosphamide and neonatal
