(Urdu: احسانخچپ (/həsənʊqbāl); born Huqba Rana (Urdu: ہویوبا رانا), (1999 January 21 – 1913 March 18, popularly known as Agha Shahid Hamid (Urdu: پند شاہید آھاغ), was a Pakistani poet, writer, philosopher, and political activist. He was a native of Fathepur Sikri in Punjab and spent his childhood days there. He was a muezzin of his local mosque in his native village of Fathepur Sikri. He later moved to Delhi to complete his secondary education where he was mentored by one of his teachers to establish the first media school in India, the Nai Talim. After independence, he became the Principal of the Government College in Sialkot and later shifted to University of Rajasthan to continue his research. His first poem, Shabd-e-rukshat (meaning "Shahid c6a93da74d
