RISA-3D is a free, yet powerful 3D modeling and analysis program for both professional and home users. . Ask HN: Can you help us design a better web startup? - startmeup We're launching a SaaS business that will be web based. The idea is that a company can set the plan for their website, and if they want more or less features they can pay for the plan that they want. This is quite different than most other SaaS providers, since you don't get a certain plan with certain features - instead, you get a certain price per user/month, and you can get more or less features.Can you help us design a good design for the site? The best way to describe it is to show you a mockup that we're working with (it's very early): you help us solve the problem we're trying to solve? ===== gus massa Who are your users? Are they in different places? Europe? North America? South America? Asia? Africa? Latin America? Australia? Oceania? You are starting on a large continent and you need to specify your target market in a specific way. If you want to support all these places, then you need to make a site that can handle many browsers (obviously). If you want to go for a simpler site, then you need to create one that is only for Europe or only for USA. How many groups of people will use this service? If there is only one group will it be one or 2? ~~~ startmeup Thank you for your detailed feedback. We are in Europe. We plan to support different markets, but we don't have a specific target market at the moment. There will be one group that will use it, it's for accounting and business administration, and we want to give them a way to make their accounting modules faster and more secure. ----- ashwinaj I think you should think about how to deal with 2 different types of users. One can make their website really cool with all bells and whistles, but the other is not very attached to these bells and whistles. I don't think your service covers both these types of
